Our Country Is Intact.
What Ails Us?
Platitudes Won't Do.
The Dollar Too Dear.

By Arthur Brisbane

NEVTON, Mass., April 21.—Traveling across this country from West to East it is difficult to believe that anything serious is the matter with it, except the foolishness of its inhabitants. A few hundred millions of acres of land cultivated, a billion acres waiting to be developed, mines from which billions have been taken in gold, silver, copper, and other mines, with more billions waiting to be developed, millions of cattle, sheep, swine, millions of able and skilled farm hands, millions of mechanics, the ablest engineers, greatest, most perfectly equipped factories in the world, such are a few of our national possessions, to which should be added waterfalls, oil and coal deposits apparently inexhaustible, to produce the power that industry demands.

What is the matter with us? The ancient dinosaur, enormous in build and power, possessed everything except a brain strong enough to direct and protect his great body. Has this dinosaur nation the same troubles? Do we lack a national intelligence as wide as our country, a governing intellect, capable of managing it from Alaska to Florida? Do we trouble a lack of intelligent interest among voters? Do we need a dictator to rule a nation that will not govern themselves?

The nation has more of everything than its people can use. More coal, oil, cotton, wheat, food and wealth than all kinds of land, machinery, skilled workers. And millions of the people have nothing, but they are afraid for the future with us?

Chamberlain, England's Chancellor of the Exchequer, told the British that they can solve all economic problems with "more money, courage and patience." Victor Mordock, a Kansas editor, remarks, "The formula for these United States, the Chamberlain formula is not copyrighted."

But courage and patience will not fill the stomachs of hungry children. Recommending WORK to millions that have no work, but can find no work to do, is a ghastly joke.

Advancing economy does not help those that have nothing to do. And if the "economy" has been taken seriously by those that have money, hugging and business conditions would have been different.

You cannot cure anything with platitudes.

A farm that needs irrigation cannot be made to pay by work, economy, courage and patience. It must have WATER, and plenty of it.

This country needs more currency, plentiful cash irrigation to stimulate commerce and industrial life.

To raise alfalfa requires 500 pounds of water for every pound of alfalfa harvested. If water cost one cent a pint, you couldn't raise alfalfa, much less the corn in the United States and too hard to get, with the few financial institutions that have no fear of the government lends them billions.

It must be remembered that the value of the dollar shifts as does the value of cotton or wheat.

In Dr. Shaw's Review of Reviews for April, in his article, "Is There a Cure for Deflation," Prof. Irving Fisher says:

"When prices go so low that a dollar will buy what once cost a dollar and a half, the dollar has really become a dollar and a half. This has actually happened in the last two years, chiefly because money, or currency, has become scarce."

The amount of your debt depends not on the number of dollars, but on the difficulty of getting each dollar that you must pay.

Concerning the national debt Prof. Fisher says:

"The United States government now owes more than ever before. The public debt, $25 billion in 1919, the maximum number of dollars, was today's debt, reduced supposedly to seventeen and a half billion in reality, in terms of the 1919 dollar, is $11 billion."

Deflation, says Prof. Fisher, increases the burden of debt by making it harder to get rid of part of it.

"Deflation weakens every debtor's collateral. It may and must drive bankrupts to the stake, stamped to pay off debts actually increased the value of the money, but the number of dollars of debt diminishes."

As the dollar increases in value the lender is able to get a harder bargain and he does it. But in the long run he, too, will suffer.

Says Prof. Fisher:

NEW MENTAL TEST FACES MASSIE

Prosecutor Plans a Dramatic Rebuttal to Break Darrow's Defense Testimony
By JAMES ADAM
International News Service Staff Correspondent

Honolulu, T. H., April 21 (INS)—The swift march of events to a climax in Honolulu's "honorable" trial may be halted today as the government plans for time to tear down the defense of insanity erected in behalf of Lieut. Thomas H. Massie by Clarence Darrow.

Prosecutor John C. Kelley will seek a formal court order of postponement until tomorrow to present Dr. Paul Bowers, mainland psychiatrist arriving here today, to examine the naval officer.

With the defense resting its case after the dramatic appearance of Dr. Charles M. Manson on the stand, Kelley concentrated on rebuttal testimony today to prove that Lieut. Massie was sane when he pulled the trigger that sent Albert Massie, his mother-in-law, Mrs. Grace Hubbard Forester, into the hospital.

Lieut. Massie, called from Kahala, where, according to the story Mrs. Massie sobbed out in court, not only led five hoodlums in attacking her, but brutally beat Lieut. Massie, some news was known when he fired the fatal shot.

ROLF'S RULING ON PARDON IS READY

Friends Fear California Governor Will Deny Freedom Plea in Bombing Case
BULLETIN
Sacramento, Cal., April 21 (AP)—Governor James Rolph Jr. today said he would announce his decision on the Thomas J. Mooney pardon appeal between 3:30 and 4 o'clock, East time, standard time, this afternoon.

By GILBERT GORDON
International News Service Staff Correspondent
April 21 (INS)—Gov. Rolph's long awaited decision on the pardon application of Tom Mooney was ready today.

With the Capitol guarded by a detail of 20 state police to prevent any possible radical demonstration, Gov. Rolph was marking time until late in the day to reveal his verdict.

Whether Mooney's pardon plea would be denied by the governor was expressed by administration officials.

Others REFUSED
Rolph, it was reported, would follow the action of three previous governors—William D. Stephens, Friend W. Richardson and C. C. Young—and refuse to free Mooney.

Warren K. Billings was Governor Rolph's private office.

Flanking the Governor at his desk were Matt J. Sullivan, former chief justice of the California Supreme court, and a group of legal advisors. Facing them was an audience of newspapermen, telegraph instruments at their elbow.

This stage setting awaited the dramatic moment when the Governor would unlock his desk to produce two sheets of typewritten orders.

MAS 3 CHOICES
One of three these sets containing a thousand words—will be Governor Rolph's eagerly awaited decision.

The other set, a voluminous file of 2,500 words, covers a legal review of the case as prepared by Judge Sullivan.

The decision will be one of three possibilities—straight pardon, denial of pardon, or commutation of sentence.

While the Capitol was convulsed that Mooney's pardon plea to let him go, a commutation of sentence would restore citizenship to Mooney, now would it wipe out the legal presumption of guilt.

Still another rumor said Rolph would grant a commutation with promise of pardon if Mooney could prove himself in an exemplary manner.

WIVES CALLS WALL ST. PEASANT STAND BUSINESS PEOPLE

EASIER ON POLITICIANS ON WALL ST.

Offices of the Reconstruction Finance Corp. Loans Condemned in Heated Terms

Washington, April 21.—"Prosperity is just as sure to come in this country as the sun is to rise in the morning," Gen. Charles G. Dawes, president of the Reconstruction Finance Corp., told the House committee considering immediate payment of the World War veterans' bonus today.

"You can't have the American people in the ditch for a couple of years without them feeling a little more cheerful and they're feeling more cheerful now," he asserted.

"It's mass attitude that counts and the change is indicated in the figures of the Reconstruction Finance Corp. that I have given you."

WALL ST. "PEASANT STAND"

The New York Stock Exchange has a "peasant stand" as far as the business of the country is concerned, Dawes said.

"It's a peasant stand, these playthings transactions on the New York Stock Exchange, the rest of the business of the country and you'll see it, and yet the whole country looks there to see what a discouraged buyers are doing," he added.

"So far as the business of the country is concerned it is a peasant stand, and it is a peasant stand, and it is a peasant stand."

"DAMNS" POLITICIANS

Asked by Rep. Treadway (R) of Massachusetts to study the Thomas "bonus" plan.

"Oh, hell, I don't ask me to I suppose I'll have to do it. I'm working night and day passing on 50 to 50 loans and then we make a loan that some damn politician can figure out how to use in we have to go over it again."

"You talk to me about a business job and by God we're going to do it, and we don't give a damn what the politicians are doing."

TREADWAY OPINION "O. K."

Treadway said he was not having him at the head of the finance corporation.

"Well, I think you're right about it," said Dawes laughing. Pressed by Treadway on one point of the bonus legislation that he had not discussed, Dawes replied:

"Now I don't want to answer something that I don't know anything about. If we have to make damn good thing for some congressman to take the same attitude."

At one point Dawes thrust his finger into his mouth and leaned forward with a hand pointed toward the committee members, saying:

"Look out when you tamper with the foundation of your currency. It will shake the foundation of the world in American credit."

ARTICLE OF MASSAGE

He said the mass attitude of the people was much like a man picking up the paper at breakfast and saying to his wife:

"My God, the country's gone to hell."

"He didn't say that but that's what he meant," Dawes added with a smile. "Then two months later he picks up the paper and says: 'My dear, conditions are better than 135 years ago yesterday.'"

Dawes was questioned particularly about the Missouri Pacific loan. He said the portion given to New York banks was only part of the picture but did release statement to give an adequate collateral for the loan.

Dawes said he considered most of the congressional comment on the corporation's activities was "just."

"We have to make big loans; these are big corporations," he said.

QUIZ WHITNEY ON SHORTS

Among those who crowded the committee room was Percy A. Rockefeller, who has been subpoenaed to testify. He told newspapermen he did not know why he would probably not be called to the stand before tomorrow.

Other large short sale holdings were 200 shares in General Motors by W. J. Crandall, 15,000 shares of Auburn by U. S. Steel by O. C. Deering and 100 shares in the American International Corp. by the same owner.

Both he and Rockefeller were in Washington today, but Gray said they would probably not be called to the stand before tomorrow.

Rich Widow Weds Chinese Restaurant Chain Owner

Milford, Conn., April 21 (AP)—The marriage of Mrs. Almira Greaves Abbott, student of Chinese art and beauty summer school at Milford, to Chan M. Jett, Chinese restaurant chain owner and consulting stockholder of a chain of New York restaurants, was announced today by the New York Times.

Mrs. Jett returned to disclose the plan for the wedding, saying they planned to keep it secret until the Harvard commencement.

MAJOR BACKS 9-CENT DIET

By FRANKLIN COLLIER

Washington, April 21 (AP)—The first day of the diet is in history. I'm still going strong on the nine-cent diet today which our war affairs officials have prescribed for those unfortunate in the general charity list.

If the first of the menu are as tempting, Mr. Marvin may be tempted to revamp her household budget for the next day by buying plenty of nourishing food. Believe it or not, I have had a lot of fun in a week. There was only one difficult moment when I had to buy my nine-cent diet.

I attended a luncheon in a Bing-camp and my wife, today.

RAIL WRECKERS ESSAY 'RACKET' COST 2 LIVES HITS COLLEGES

Portsmouth, N. H., April 21 (AP)—A passenger train on the Norfolk and Western Railroad was wrecked 20 miles east of here early today. Two of the crew were killed but none of the passengers was injured. Investigators said the wreck was caused by the malicious removal of four bolts from a switch. An 18-year-old boy was questioned. The dead are Engineer J. J. Kemp and Fireman J. J. Kemp, both of Portsmouth.

TAX ON CHECKS OPPOSED

Washington, April 21 (AP)—A resolution that the tax bill be so written that no person would be allowed to make more than a million dollars annually or receive gifts or inheritances of more than five million, was introduced today by Senator Lend (D., Louisiana).

Washington, April 21 (AP)—Opposition to Secretary Miller's proposal for a two-cent tax on checks was laid today before the Senate Finance Committee by a number of witnesses in the hearings on the billion dollar revenue bill.

Miller estimated the tax would yield $300,000,000, but opponents asserted it would harm business and the farmer, be unfair in those levying small checks and yield less revenue.

Clyde L. King, Pennsylvania secretary of revenue, protested against the retroactive provisions for revocation of estate to allow for shrinkage, which he said would cost the state $100,000,000 and the federal government only $400,000,000.

The principle, King said, was to reduce hardship on heirs of wealthy persons who died while securities were high.

"But this principle has not been recognized by the federal government in taxing either the income of individuals or corporations, many of whom are still struggling to pay delinquent taxes on income earned in 1928, 1929 and 1930," he said.

To deprive Pennsylvania of $25,000,000 in this way, King said, "means practically bankruptcy."

Other witnesses objected to stock transfer and realty taxes.

Armed Guard Present as English Girl Weds Aged Moslem

SHEIK'S SON HAD HALTED ONE CEREMONY

Held Up Marriage by Threatening to Cut Off Beard of Mohammedan Priest

Bombay, April 21 (AP)—Shaukat Ali, 60 years old, one of the most important Mohammedan leaders in India, married a young attractive English woman in the presence of an armed guard today after the Moslem's son had stopped one ceremony by threatening to cut off a priest's beard.

Shaukat Ali persuaded a Mohammedan priest to perform his marriage in Mrs. Elizabeth Ryan, 25-year-old divorcee, the Moslem's son, who was present, might try to harm or kidnap the bride.

The armed guard was present because it was feared some Moslems, particularly Shaukat's son, might try to harm or kidnap the bride.

The huge Moslem, who weighs 300 pounds, handed his English bride, who accepted the Mohammedan faith, a dowry of $125, and she immediately went into purdah (seclusion).

Earlier in the day the marriage had been stopped at the last minute under dramatic circumstances when the son, Zuhair Ahmed, threatened the marriage priest.

Shaukat Ali and his fiancée were preparing to go to the altar when the Mohammedan priest refused to perform the ceremony, alleging it was not in conformity with Islamic law.

Hardly had this episode occurred when Shaukat's son appeared with a knife and made his threat to cut off the priest's beard if he performed the ceremony. This was when he made the greatest insult possible to any Mohammedan.

Shaukat Ali had renounced Christianity and embraced Islam in order to marry Shaukat, but the Mohammedan clergy raised difficulties in connection with her divorce.

The whole Mohammedan community was thrown into confusion as Shaukat insisted he would marry the girl even if the ecclesiastical authorities forced him to leave India.

"I will live in America or in England, but I won't renounce my love for the girl," he declared.

Later, the girl withdrew and the ceremony took place with the guard present.

Quincy Firemen in Battle With Hornets

Quincy firemen were given a surprise when a call came for a fire of hornets under the eaves of a house in Braintree, West Quincy.

Armed with plaster hooks, a crew of men under Lieut. William J. Quinn, started to start the nest. After they had started it was a matter of minutes as to which was doing the routing—firemen or hornets.

Philadelphians first riot for food broke loose here today, and for half an hour pandemonium reigned in the business section as hundreds of police and marchers engaged in battle.

Two score persons including police and marchers were injured in the riot. Hundreds were arrested. The radicals marched with signs of communitarian nature, and when the police attempted to stop the parade the fighting began.

One patrolman was dragged from his seat in a patrol wagon and beaten badly before his comrades broke through and rescued him. His head was badly mutilated and it was feared he may die.

MAN, 55, HELD AS SLAYER Killed as He Goes to Work for City Aid

Fate, in one of her moods, decreed today that Maxine Parrell, 55, of 26 Acadia st., Dorchester, should pay with his life for charity he has been receiving from the city.

Parrell was run over and killed in Blue Hill ave. near Woodmont by a city truck in which he was riding to a public works job to earn the aid he has been getting from the welfare department.

The youthful tourist was met by a policeman in Melrose, the latter when a side board dropped off and he fell out and under a wheel.

Edward J. Sweeney, of Dorchester, the driver, was unaware of the accident until witnesses shouted to him.

EX-WIFE IN MURDER QUIZ

"I want to see Eddie's murderer," she said, "but, for the sake of our little girl, I want to keep out of it. I am going to let the authorities as much as possible."

The first Mrs. Brinker said she summed Brinker in 1928 last year because he was $50 in arrears on payments for the support of the child.

At that time, she asserted, Brinker told her:

"You won't have to think of me much longer," then he said that a girl friend fired a couple of shots at him a short time previously, according to Mrs. Brinker.

WIDOW OF SLAIN MINNEOLA MAN Grilled Again in Bludgeoning of Pair

By QUENTIN REYNOLDS International News Service Staff Correspondent

New York, April 21 (INS)—Interplay of fiery loves and fierce hatreds leading to a passionate lust for revenge were accepted today by police as motives for the double murder of comely Rose J. Welk, 29, and her married companion, Edward Brinker, Jr., 35.

Brinker salesman for an electric light firm, and Miss Welk, secretary in a gas company office, were found in a field two miles north of Mineola. Brinker was dead, Miss Welk dying. Both had been savagely bludgeoned.

A plain gold ring encasing a small diamond and engraved "J. L. Welk" the letters standing for "John" the husband, was missing from the finger of the dead man, who wore it as a gift from his second wife, provided Nassau county investigators with a possible clue of the motive for the double killing.

WIFE AGAIN GRILLED

Mrs. Josephine Nadell Tilton Brinker, 28, a woman of Spanish blood, the slain man's second wife, was put through a gruesome ordeal by police today after she and numerous relatives of both victims were grilled for several hours.

She was taken to the morgue to view the battered body of her husband, and then led to the deserted spot in Garden City Park, Long Island, where the crime was committed some seven years ago.

When Mrs. Brinker was taken to the morgue, Edward offered, she appeared distressed, but under a strain greater than that shown during a several hour questioning yesterday.

Already at the prosecutor's office were Emma Strickland, a Manhattan woman, who came to Brinker among those of a number of women in a note book which she carried with her, and several friends of the slain couple.

BRINKER QUESTIONED

These included James Dixon, Long Island City; Charles Roberts, a Brooklyn man, who came to Brinker the two men live, and her two daughters.

Detectives were sent out to take into custody for questioning Dixon's brother, Bert, who was with Mrs. Brinker Monday or Tuesday night when the crime was committed. Mrs. Brinker had been with Brinker with the latter.

Brinker's first wife, Mrs. Ruth Carnes Brinker, 35, mother of the slain man's 14-year-old daughter, was released after being questioned for six hours.

HANGING 'DOG' ROOTS PIGEONS

The cooing of many pigeons disturbed sleepers in the Beacon Chambers, Myrtle st., Beacon Hill.

And on after tracking his brain for a solution, Manager Elliot hit upon a brilliant idea. He hung a dog from the edge of the roof. It was a realistic dog. But it fooled the pigeons very well. But it fooled the minds of many pedestrians. They complained to the police and they complained to Elliot. Everything else all right when the manager proved it was only a wooden dog.

And says it works as well as any scarecrow could.

MAGRATH JOINS PROBE OF CAPE DEATH CASE

Falmouth, April 21.—Dist. Atty. William C. Crowley today ordered a thorough investigation into the death last September of Dr. George E. M. Donkin, 73, believed to have been caused as a government informer in a war against a powerful rum syndicate with headquarters here.

The district attorney instructed State Detective Ernest P. Bradford to question the doctor's widow, Mrs. Mary Wheeler of North Falmouth, as to the explanation given by certain persons regarding the injuries which the doctor received in an alleged automobile accident.

At the same time Medical Examiner George Burgess Magrath of Suffolk County was investigating the failure of hospital authorities to notify him when Dr. Donkin died in Baker Memorial Hospital.

AUTO ACCIDENT BLAMED

Causes of death were given as fractured jaw and bronchial pneumonia. It was reported that Dr. Donkin had received his injuries in an automobile accident on Cape Cod but despite the notation of injuries in the death certificate, the medical examiner was not notified.

Throwing belief that the aged doctor met his death at the hands of rum runners resulted in a check-up of his activities.

Friends who brought the doctor home said he received his injuries at a house party attended by Brockton men. Later it was reported that he had been injured in a fall from his own automobile.

Auburn, April 21.—Lack of funds with which to marry caused Dorothy Kennen, 14, a high school freshman, and Rudolph Aubuchon, 27, to abandon their plan to elope and return to their homes. The girl vanished via her bedroom window. The two were back early today.

HOLMES' TWO LAYERS QUIT THIS CASE

Pail River, April 21 (INS).—Trial before a jury of three $50,000 damage suits brought by George Willis against three former co-defendants in the Holmstrom case resumed today.

The district attorney instructed Judge John M. Gibbs to suspend Court adjournment for the jury until Monday.

The trial, which opened yesterday, had been featured by the appearance on the stand of Holmes.

He testified that the defendant, Rev. Harold H. Critchlow of Brockton, Rev. Robert L. Roberts of Fairhaven and Rev. Raymond L. Hibbard of Osterville, all ministers of the Unitarian New England Methodist Conference, conspired against him because of jealousy over his success with followers in his own church.

He said he had been reduced to a life of poverty and had been injured mentally and physically by charges brought against him involving Miss Antoinette Fortin, a tea room waitress. He denied relating with Miss Fortin, who testified that he had been a member of the Unitarian church.

The defendants were in court ready to make a denial of the Holmes charges.

B. & M. Speeds Up May Trains

Clever cooks do something new with Round Steak

To make simple foods a real treat is the triumph of a clever cook. Here is a recipe that gives an appealing new taste. Mix one pound ground round steak and 3 teaspoons Guldens' Prepared Mustard. Salt to taste, broil to desired rareness, basting with juice in pan. Your husband and family will praise the appetite-arousing flavor Guldens' adds to everyday foods.

2 SAVED FROM DEATH IN FIRE IN CHELSEA

A policeman smashed down two doors early today to rescue an unconscious woman and man, assist another man to the street and rouse seven others in time for them to flee a fire at 51 Shurtleff st., Chelsea.

Patrolman William Sullivan discovered the blaze, but found all doors of the three-story brick dwelling locked.

After crashing the front door with his shoulder, Sullivan rushed to the second floor and broke his way through another to find Mr. and Mrs. Hyman Tiger and Abraham Glazer prostrate on the floor.

Mrs. Tiger and Glazer were unconscious and Tiger was fast losing his senses in the heavy smoke. Sullivan carried Mrs. Tiger to the street, returned for Glazer and then helped Tiger.

His shouts roused the others in the house, including Mr. and Mrs. Louis Siegel and their two children on the first floor and Mr. and Mrs. Barney Finsburg and one child on the top floor.

Frank Hanson of Leander 1 was cut by flying glass as he fought the fire. He was treated in Chelsea Memorial Hospital. The rescued were treated at the scene.

D. A. R. IN DRIVE TO SHIP ALIENS

Washington, April 21 (AP)—A resolution to empower the President to order all unemployed aliens to leave the United States in unemployment cases was adopted today by the Daughters of the American Revolution.

As in past years, the organization approved resolutions for building the navy to treaty limits.

The D. A. R. declared its recognition of Soviet Russia and endorsed legislation for reducing immigration quotas.

Secretary Dook, who was on today's program, was commended for "a greatly increased activity in the matter of the deporting of unlawful alien residents."

All Deported Illegal

Aliens Had Been Working

Practically all the aliens being deported from Boston for illegal entry into this country were employed, Mrs. Anna C. M. Tillingsham, U. S. commissioner of immigration here, declared today.

We have what we call a voluntary application system where by those aliens who have entered the country within the last three years and have become public burdens through poverty may receive free passage back to their native land," she said.

"Those we find to have entered illegally are almost without exception employed in steady jobs depriving citizens of work. Our Hartford office sent eight men to me last week for deportation and has just reported 16 more. All of these were working when discovered."

"All we hope to do is lessen the economic pressure on native citizens in the present crisis by deporting those that have no right here."

Dead Hero's Dad Offers War Risk Insurance to Aid U. S.

Washington, April 21 (AP)—An old man who lost his only son in the war and saved $3000 from war risk insurance payments today offered to turn them into his $2750 monthly check over to the Government to help meet expenses.

In a letter to Secretary Mills the man, Charles F. Thompson of Philadelphia, said he would send the money at once if the Government would accept it. He added he had given every dollar he had to aid the United States during the war and wished to do his share to help his Government now.

SMITH REFUSES TO HALT DRY PROPAGANDA

The use of Anti-Saloon League propaganda in the public schools of Lynn is all right with Payson Smith, state commissioner of education.

Replying to a letter from John W. Watson of the Crusaders, Commissioner Smith wrote:

"I ought to state to you plainly in reply to your suggestions as to what you believe to be the duty of this department, that the department has neither the disposition nor the authority to control school committees in matters which the Legislature has wisely left to their jurisdiction."

GOES FOR MELROSE, TOO
A similar stand was taken by the head of the department of education in regard to a complaint by the Crusaders that dry propaganda was being used in schools of Melrose.

In connection with the Lynn complaint, Smith wrote:

"In the specific case you mention in your letter of April 16, all the points raised by you are under the control of the school committee of the city you name. That committee is plainly not answerable either to this department or to any other group or organization except the citizens of the city which the committee serves."

N.Y. OPENS ARMS TO GIBBONS

The world-famous headline hunter for International News Service and Universal Service stepped from a train in Poughkeepsie station to the tune of loud huzzas from a reception committee of distinguished New Yorkers.

"Hello, everybody!" he barked, in the voice he made familiar to millions of radio listeners before went to "cover" the Sino-Japanese struggle in the cockpit of Asia.

Smiling broadly, he saluted the greetings waiting to take him on an all-day round of receptions.

McGinley Guilty in Death of His Father

Theodore McGinley, 26, of "Yankee Point," Cambridge, interrupted the trial in Middlesex Superior court today to plead guilty to manslaughter in connection with the death of his father, a bricklayer.

He was then sentenced to two and a half years in the House of Correction by Judge Thomas J. Hammond. The elder McGinley was found dead in his room March 22. Lieut. Shannon of the Cambridge police testified yesterday that the son admitted punching his father twice in an effort to keep him from getting more liquor.

"HELP THE PRESIDENT"

AN ODD APPEAL ON YOUR CAR

By GILBERT SELDES

THE ORANGE PLAQUES right below the license plates asking us to repeal the Eighteenth Amendment have become so common that you notice them about as little as "Guest of Canada" on a windshield. They have, in fact, taken the place of the gay and old-fashioned pennants which were an advertisement of something, but I never knew what, as they usually bore the names of cities I had never heard of before. The other day I noticed some unfamiliar reading matter on the back of a car, on a rather muddy maroon plate; skulking up to the rear wheel like a tire slasher, I read with a shock the words, "Help the President." I had not known that the President was in such a bad way. Looking further, I found that the entire exhortation read, "Help the President to Law Enforcement." This gave me pleasure.

Rich and Open

It was, for instance, a pleasure to note that at least one Dry in the City of New York is rich enough to own a car—it was a big, and I am sure, expensive limousine. A pleasure, also, to note that the Drys have given up their almost too fastidious reticence and that, at last, they are coming out with their side of the case. It seems very new since a Dry has said a single thing in defense of the prohibition law. It seems years, but I suppose it is only a matter of hours.

Help How?

I have not been able to giggle the little sign from my mind, which is naturally a worrying midget. It worries me to think that the President, disposing of the Department of Justice, free to call upon the revenue service, empowered, in a pinch, to appeal to governors, and even as a desperate resource, the army and navy, should be in such a narrow place that he is begged to help him. Perhaps I am wrong in thinking that the little sign alluded to prohibition.

Perhaps it was an appeal to us not to shoot our neighbors, not to falsify our income tax returns, not to accept rebates from railroads or give them as a desperate resource, the army and navy, should be in such a narrow place that he is begged to help him. Perhaps I am wrong in thinking that the little sign alluded to prohibition.

"Jamais l'Audace"

I am still worrying. I worry over the thought that the President of the United States is always on the defensive. The Constitution not only allows, but compels, the President to recommend to the consideration of Congress "such measures as he shall judge necessary and expedient." A President, therefore, who recognized the appalling and the shameful failure of a law would be under obligation to hold the laws of the country, he could only enforce a law he himself held depreciable if he was pressing for its repeal.

It appears that the President has no such thoughts about the Eighteenth Amendment. And it also appears more forcefully, that even if he did have such thoughts, the Anti-Saloon League would not for a minute tolerate his saying so.

"Help the President to Law Enforcement" is not as respectable and as honorable as it seems. If the President is compelled to enforce the law, the duty of every citizen is not to help him, but to fight desperately for the repeal of that law. The President is not only the defender of the way things are; his greatest duty is to be the center of the way things will be.

I asked a lawyer the other day whether the phrase so often used in insurance policies and other contracts, "An Act of God" ever referred to anything pleasant, and he was unable to recall a single instance. Acts of God he told me were only those strange movements of the forces of nature which brought calamity upon us and against which we are powerless. It made me think that when people are ruculent they may throw in the word "Act of God" as a protuberant phrase, but that they thereby ascribe causes to themselves, whereas they are inclined to blame the Divine for the disasters they have suffered. George Santayana used to say that people are much more firmly convinced that God is powerful than that they are good. (Copyright, 1932)

Canadian 'Mounties' Leading Man Hunt

Toronto, N. E. April 21 (AP)—Posses, led by Royal Canadian mounted police searched an aroused countryside today for two youths wanted in the slaying of an aged storekeeper.

The youths entered the little Toronto store of George Smith, 65, and called for cigarettes. He turned to get them and they shot him. Then they forced his wife to hand over $40.

Gloria Swanson Expected to Make English Film Before Returning

Los Angeles, April 22.—American friends of Gloria Swanson may have to wait until fall personally to greet her new daughter, Michèle Bridget. Gloria has been approached by one of the British companies to make a feature picture, story, director and cast to be selected by La Belle Swanson, herself.

The lady, we are told, is an responsive mood and eager to make the foreign picture — providing she can get the right American release. The stars of Swanson magnitude are beginning to realize it's necessary to make a picture abroad if they want to keep their names before the public on the continent.

The advent of the talkies has wrought a cruel change in foreign popularity. There are few personalities that have been able to weather the storm of talks invasion—especially in Germany, Spain and France.

THIS IS LIFE

JUDGE IN THE MIDDLE
WHEN CALLED UPON
TO RULE ON SPIRITS
By ROBERT E. ROGERS

WHAT MUST HAVE BEEN a scene unique in courtroom procedure occurred in London the other day, when a spiritualist medium who was suing a newspaper went into a trance in the courtroom and spoke with tongues. That must have been something of a problem for the presiding justice. Could he adjourn court with a witness still in the chair, at least to all bodily appearance, although her spirit might have been far, far away roaming the hills and valleys of a better world?

And if Little Brighteyes, the Indian control, was speaking through the lady, did the laws of evidence apply and, if so, how? Can an Indian control be bound by an oath? Can an Indian control be held for perjury? And if the control refuses to answer questions can the judge commit her for contempt of court? If not, can he hold in contempt the presumably helpless and unconscious body of her mouthpiece? As they say down South, I crave to know.

Present, Past, Future for 50 Cents

I never encountered but one trance medium in my life. She earned her living at a summer resort, and as she charged only 50 cents per trance to tell the past, present and future, she may not have been the most representative species of her profession. Or is it an art? Or, in the most literal sense of the word, a calling?

I do not remember a single thing she told me. But I do remember vividly that half way through her trance her voice changed and she called out with startling distinctness, presumably to some materialization in the back room. "Take them point off the front of the above." Then she relaxed instantaneously into her communion with the infinite.

Which reminds me that old Sir Oliver Lodge announced the other day that he knew, on the highest authority, that all this world is illusion. But that is no news. The Hindus knew that centuries ago. Maya, they call it, illusion, not to be confused with the Nirvanah of the Buddhists. It is a long time since we have heard anything from the post-war group of spiritualists, whose grief at their losses in the war, and the losses of all Europe, took the form of communications with the other world. Sir Oliver Lodge's book on Oliver, his dead son, was perhaps the most famous example, though Sir Arthur Conan Doyle was the best publicized leader of the cult. But when Sir Arthur took to seeing not only ghosts but fairies, the little people of old England, and to photographing them, I imagine that a good many people lost faith in him.

Heyday of Spiritualism Past

The heyday of spiritualism, I suppose, was in the days of Hyslop and Hodgson and William James and Mrs. Piper. Do you remember when David Belasco produced so exquisitely that really touching play "The Return of Peter Grimm" with its wonderful play of faint lights and shadows in the twilight, haunted house? To give the piece some semblance of scientific authenticity he had his believing doctor made up in the likeness of William James himself.

Speaking of Mrs. Piper, one of the most interesting works in the literature of spiritualism is to be found in the book entitled "The Quest for Dean Bridgman Connor" (L. W. Inc. & Co.) by A. J. Philpott, a member of the editorial staff of the Boston Globe. The book details the story of an interesting assignment as a young reporter ever had. Connor was reported dead in Mexico, but Mrs. Piper the spiritualist, then at the height of her reputation, insisted that he was still alive. She described with uncanny accuracy the scenes in Mexico which Connor must have known, and Mr. Philpott was later able to check the accuracy of her description.

But he noted that in some cases she was right and in others wrong. To make a long story short, the case came to the conclusion that Mrs. Piper had received her visualizations from members of an earlier searching party who had unconsciously transferred to her mind images which they retained in theirs, without word of mouth. In short, Philpott proved as nearly as such things can be proved that Connor was dead and that the most that could be ascribed to Mrs. Piper was a kind of mind-reading, a kind of telepathy which in itself is not such a bad mystery as mysteries go. It is a most interesting book.

No one gifted with creative imagination ever delved more deeply into the mystery than Robert Browning. Douglas Home, the American medium of the '50s, had something of an influence over Elizabeth Barrett Browning. Browning distinctly disapproved of this influence, having naturally a very healthy, supple nature. He believed in immortality but not in spiritualism. He feared for Mrs. Browning's frail health. I believed that he sent Home away, eventually. Years later he wrote that massive poetic monologue, "Sludge the Medium," a kind of prophecy of Douglas Home.

Medium Speaks for Himself

As always, he let his man speak for himself, gave him all the rope he wanted. Sludge the Medium has been caught faking. On being threatened with exposure he confesses the whole business, bares the secrets of the séance, all the trickery of the tambourine and the strange music, the floating wreath of flowers, the materializations, the closed slate with the other worldly writing, and all the rest. He does not mention ectoplasm because Sir Arthur has not yet discovered it.

He narrates rather comically how he made bad mistakes at the beginning, mixing up his history and geography, making Plato and Aristotle write in Latin, "before I found the useful book that knows." In short, he shoots the works.

Then with one of those brilliant glimpses to be found so often in Browning's monologues, in which, as it were, the created character takes matters into his own hands and speaks not the words put into his mouth but his own words, Sludge cries that, faked though he is, trickster and charlatan, caught and convicted, yet will he swear upon his honor that at times there happen which he himself is not responsible for and cannot understand.

And there Browning lets it rest and there, I suspect, we all must let it rest. However much we jib at too exact descriptions of the geography and eschatology and social conditions of the after life, to which both Sir Oliver and Sir Arthur were prone, the best we can offer, with James and Hyslop, is a suspended judgment. We may say, in the phrasing of the old strict but merciful verdict of the Scotch courts, NOT PROVEN.

SUPREME COURT FINDS NEGLIGENCE AT HOSPITAL

Upholds Verdict of Negligence on the Part of Nurses at Birth of Mahoney Child

The Supreme Court today found that a burn on the neck and left shoulder of John J. Mahoney, eight days after his birth, was due to neglect on the part of one of both nurses at the Holy hospital in Dorchester.

In its decision on the negligence suit brought by the parents of the child, the court found that the nurses had been negligent in not discovering the burn and in not reporting it to the doctor.

The court also found that the hospital was negligent in not providing adequate supervision for the nurses.

LYONS COMING HEARING ON

The suggestion that elimination of railroad grade crossings has been over-emphasized to the detriment of highway interchange junctions, was made today at a state safety conference, at Hopedale.

Bradford H. P. Hammond, engineer of the Massachusetts Department of the Governor's committee on state highway safety, pointed out that the state has 1,000 grade crossings in Massachusetts last year, 100 of which were closed.

"We are not 25 per cent on railroad crossings," he said.

"In my opinion," he said, "that the motorist public has been educated from childhood to shun the rail and the railroad track."

BLASTS FEARED IN MEDFORD SCHOOLS

Bulging walls, faulty heating apparatus, falling ceilings and "other serious conditions" in Medford schools were disclosed today in a report by the school committee.

The committee called on Mayor John H. Burke to recommend a transfer of funds from other city departments to help pay the determined amount.

Mayor Burke said that the conditions had accumulated before his administration and that $200,000 was available to the committee for repairs.

$200,000 AVAILABLE.

Several other moves in correcting the conditions of the market were made and will be made and have yet to be passed upon by the board of aldermen he said.

Lewis H. Peters, city solicitor and chairman of the committee, auditor has ruled that the $200,000 for general building repairs may be used for school.

It was pointed out that the expressed because of rods in the heating apparatus that collapse under high pressure and three ways to correct the situation.

The Brooks and Lincoln schools and Medford high school are in the more serious danger, the report said, in regard to heating apparatus.

Eight class rooms in the high school have "battered" ceilings, in which temporary braces have been placed to guard against the falling of plaster on the heads of pupils, the report said.

Congress Must Act to Keep Flag Foremost in Merchant Air Service

After careful consideration a sub-committee of the Senate Committee on Commerce has made a favorable report of the Merchant Airship bill introduced in the Senate by Senator McNary of Oregon.

Congressman Grosser, of Ohio, introduced a similar bill in the House, which is now before the House Committee on Commerce, of which Congressman Rayburn, of Texas, is the able chairman.

The purpose of this proposed legislation is to develop American air transport service overseas, to encourage the construction in the United States by American capital of American airships for use in foreign commerce and to extend the protection of the maritime law to foreign commerce by airships.

No new principles of governmental policy are involved in these legislative proposals.

They merely afford to lighter-than-air transportation benefits similar to those provided for other transportation agencies.

And unless legislation of this sort is enacted by Congress, private American enterprise will not be justified in establishing airship lines to operate across the two great oceans and link up the three Americas.

This enabling legislation seems all the more desirable when we consider the favorable position the United States enjoys for the development of airship transportation by virtue of its vast supply of helium, the non-inflammable lifting gas upon which the operation of airships depends.

This country enjoys a practical monopoly of helium, but this monopoly is of value only to the extent that it is utilized.

But there is no assurance that helium supplies may not soon be discovered in other parts of the world, and several foreign countries are conducting extensive explorations to that end.

The plentiful supply of helium now available in this country would give to the operation of American airships a degree of safety unobtainable by foreign competitors.

And American operators of airships would have an even start today in skill and experience, provided they are not compelled to wait until foreign lines have seized the important trade routes.

The importance of prompt action in this matter is obvious to the members of the Senate Commerce Committee, who have favorably reported the McNary Merchant Airship bill.

Once these measures are enacted into law, Congress will be entitled to the credit for justifying private capital in undertaking an airship construction program and developing an American flag transoceanic service for passengers, express and mails.

It takes several years to build a merchant airship. There is no time to lose if the American flag is to be first in the operation of transoceanic airship service.

Beer Wins Again

Paul DeBruyn, when in training, drinks beer and eats plain, substantial food. He says they give him stamina.

This rugged young German won the gruelling marathon race, outstripping some 200 competitors. Only one other had traversed in faster time the long grind from Hopkinton to Boston, up hill, down dale and over hard pavements.

Henri Digiante, the Frenchman, drinks wine. Rarely, if ever, has a more powerful and graceful figure decorated the athletic arena.

Dr. Otto Pelizer, speedy runner, and Schmeling, stalwart fellow, are beer drinkers, in moderation. So are Sharkey and Schaff.

These palatable beverages seem to stimulate, not enervate, these strong, healthy athletes who co-ordinate brain and strength more finely than the average man. They give a tonic to health and a conviviality which chases gloom and dull care.

Our average American workman who returns from a day of hard labor in factory and shop would derive the same advantage to health and morale if he could have a glass of beer with his supper at the family table. He would be very well satisfied, and happy in the recognition of this right. True temperance would make strides which are impossible under arbitrary prohibition or any other sumptuary law.

Hurting Auto Industry

President Hoover has urged us to go in for a greater use of the automobile.

Well he might. There are some 36,000 fewer passenger cars registered in Massachusetts today than a year ago.

Mr. Hoover probably never heard of our compulsory automobile insurance law, with all its high rates, inconsistencies and irritations which provoke many owners against putting their cars onto the highways.

Here in Massachusetts they are cluttering up the auto with all sorts of expensive insurances, fees and taxes. While at Washington they are talking of putting another tax of pre-war burden upon it.

Mr. Hoover and officials everywhere should be thinking of means that will encourage, not discourage, the autoist. Idle talk and general platitudes will never do it.

Humaneness Wins

The selectmen of Weymouth had at last decided not to deport residents who seek public welfare aid before they have acquired a settlement of five years in the town.

Had they stood by the original order, some 200 men, women and children would have been forced out of town merely because the breadwinners of the family can't find any bread to win at this time.

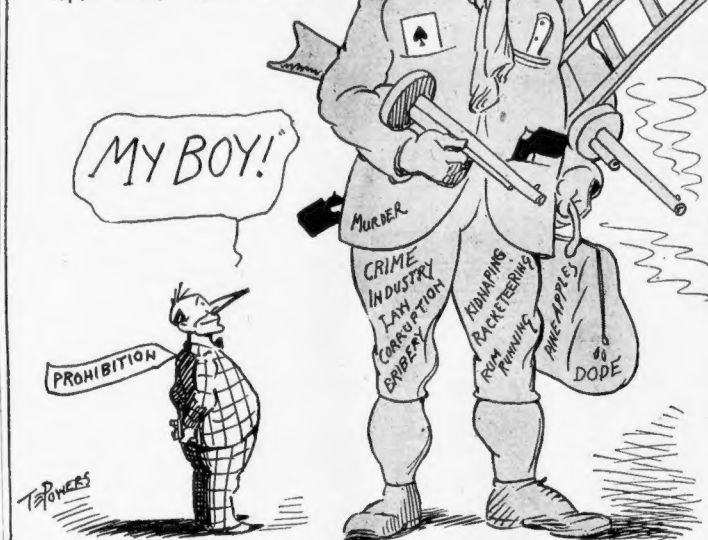

Well, there is some sense and humaneness in public life after all.

The earlier decision to get rid of these people smacked of the cruel philosophy which hanged witches, branded women with the scarlet letter and "warned out" paupers, sending them like stray dogs along the highways to eke out an existence as best they could.

Bowery Drifters

NEW YORK, April 21.—Among perpetual down and outers and seasonal drifters on the Bowery these days, is a distinct array of men who do not belong. Only a world collapse could have brought about their submergence. They are reminiscent of so many sheep stunned by a sudden bolt.

Like many of the Bowery's tattered, they become imarticulate. Such tight-lipped and side-of-the-mouth monosyllabic talk is wrongly classified as the unbragging jargon of the underworld. It is found wherever men seek to obliterate the past. In Nome or Port Said.

In one mission, there are seven men of respectable families who never drank. Five years ago their salaries ranged from $7000 to $30,000 yearly. All not only lost their jobs but savings through bank failures and investments in shoddy securities.

Ambition has been burnt out. They have become so utterly passive to the world of activity they do not read the newspapers. Most of their waking hours they merely sit and stare. At night they lose fitfully in the groping extortions of wait on barren floors of flop rooms.

Sociologists have found that these types do not remain economic problems for long periods. Somehow they vanish and are believed to be those who remain through the unidentified on the slabs of the morgue. There have been more than 500 during the past year.

Hand kissing was once looked upon as a gesture of betwixt-betwixt noblemen. Count Boni de Castellani, airy and birdlike, mimicked his migration away from Fifth ave. Drawing rooms, smacking shriveled down on the slabs of the morgue.

Anna Gould, and became The 400's white-haired boy. But the press laughed. Today hand kissing, like the wrist watch, is no longer feared. American gallants indulge this salutation everywhere—in theater boxes, cafe anterooms and at the opera. A night recently I even saw a gang gorilla greet a night club hostess in the continental manner and felt like hippy-hopping away with an arm skimpo.

A friend was shopping in a flower store when a fugitive thief dashed upon him, clutching a bouquet. He shot himself, falling lifeless at my friend's feet. When his brain functioned again two hours later he was at a pool and counter place, eating soft boiled eggs, although it was 9 p. m.

What Holds Life Together
I BROKE my neckless. The beads rolled about the floor.

A second before they had all been together, strung on one string, part of one lovely, shining whole.

Now they were nothing—only shattered bits of bright—nest and scattered—like that, they're not a thing.

I sat holding the broken string in my hand, thinking, A man's life is like a necklace—so many little things strung on one string—no secret string of purpose, or faith.

And when they are strung together like that, a man's life means something; even the smallest part of a man's life has value and significance.

But if a man's life isn't strung together—if there isn't one purpose in him, or one faith, that runs through everything—why, then, his life is as meaningless as a broken necklace—just scattered beads, flung aimlessly about.

And I thought of the empty, unhappy faces I pass every day; of the empty, unhappy people who write to me, asking me if life is worth while—asking me what life is all about.

It is so plain that many of their lives are about nothing. They have nearly all the things that other lives have. They have friends, work, health, food, clothes. They go places and do things. They even appear merry at times—feel a little excitement.

And yet—there is something wrong. They aren't getting anything out of life. Life doesn't mean anything to them.

Life has no meaning for them because they do not put any meaning into it. They have no purpose, no plan, no strong, central belief, or desire, or faith, on which to string their separate acts and desires.

They have things. They do things. Things happen to them, and in them. But the things do not hold them together. There is nothing to hold them together. So they drift about, scattered aimlessly about.

And there are other people—sometimes very simple people who have very little, do very little. Yet their lives have great meaning for them. Even the smallest experience means something.

For they have something in them that gives meaning to everything! Sometimes it is LOVE—a love that warms and colors every smallest act and desire.

Sometimes it is AMBITION—an ambition that puts everything to account.

Sometimes it is WORK—the power of doing a good job; the way of serving the whole world through that job.

Sometimes it is HUNGER FOR TRUTH—and if there is that hunger in a man, his soul is fed on every scrap that comes its way. Nothing is too ugly, or too dangerous, or too mysterious for him, for such a man's consideration.

And sometimes—and this, I think, is the strongest thing of all on which a man's life may be strung—sometimes it is FAITH IN GOD.

Life, for him, can never lose its meaning. Behind every hardship, every success, every loss or gain he will see a Presence looming—he will feel a Hand.

Love, ambition, work, faith, hunger for truth—these things hold lives together.

What holds YOUR life together? What gives YOUR life meaning? And if it hasn't meaning, is this, perhaps, the reason?

A Heartening Sign

By Merryle Stanley Rukeyer

OLD stabilizing measures should be taken at this time to save business from further deterioration growing out of strong adverse trends which are under way.

In this connection the enlarged effort of the Federal Reserve System to arrest deflation through pumping additional credit into the banking system is noteworthy.

Doctrinaire opposition to such a counter deflationary maneuver overlooks the alarming extent to which purchasing power has been destroyed through the rapid shrinkage of bank deposits, the chief medium of exchange in our money economy.

Bank deposits can be recreated through commercial loans to manufacturers, retailers and farmers. The new reconstruction machinery and the open market policy of the Federal Reserve make it practicable for banks to reverse their penny pinching practices and to go out and encourage honest and competent business men to borrow.

It behooves the Federal Reserve authorities to exert leadership in the direction of inducing member banks to pass along the new credit to the public instead of extinguishing it through repayment of indebtedness at the central banks.

The individual banker does not feel ready to shift around to a constructive viewpoint until he is assured that other bankers will do likewise. As long as there is a stampede toward unreasoning liquidity no individual banker feels inclined to break away from the herd.

It is true that the banks have been liberal in offering credit to gilt-edged corporations, rich in cash, which do not need borrowed funds.

But they cannot really accomplish relief—no counter deflation—until bankers are willing to extend loans to sound institutions with less cash on hand which do need to borrow.

The Glass-Steagall Act gave the Federal Reserve the power and the courage to intervene. The present campaign for expansion of the circulating medium represents an attempt to make use of this emergency legislation.

But the circle must be completed through the buoyant co-operation of regular bankers who deal with the business public.

In alluding to their failure thus far, Wallace Brett Donham, dean of the Graduate School of Business Administration, Harvard, points out in his new book, entitled, "Business Looks at the Unforeseen":

"Sheer individualism in a banking system means that all banks in times like these fail to provide the facilities the community is entitled to expect from its banks.

"The cure of this credit situation, if started now, does not involve inflation. Expansion of credit is not necessarily inflation. . . . Industry needs the stimulus of higher prices, and all debtors are entitled to expect such a renewal of price trends. Even if inflation to a moderate extent were involved it should assume its dangers rather than the far greater dangers of making permanent our present drastic deflation of prices. . . . There is no more important problem than the restoration of monetary conditions to the level of 1929 level."

The possibility of carrying the present Federal Reserve drive against the spirit of panic and stagnation to a logical conclusion constitutes a heartening sign on the troubled business horizon.

Loyal to Home Town

Charles N. Vilas went back home. No doubt about it. He left his entire fortune of $1,600,000 to the little town of Alstead, N. H., in which he was born and to which he returned for his declining years.

He set aside $100,000 as a direct gift to the town treasury, $175,000 for a new high school and $125,000 for its maintenance; $75,000 for band concerts for the townspeople, other sums to the nearby churches, hospitals and golf clubs. His estate, upon the death of his widow, will revert to the town for the purpose of lifting the tax load from the shoulders of his old friends and neighbors.

Here was a great man, of deep sentiment, like the famed Irish warrior who returned to his native Cork just before each battle gall rendered strength and inspiration.

There was in this man none of the apocryphal contempt which the "smart" boys of today manifest for the little New England towns which gave them birth, education and the heritage of fine history and good surroundings. An element of true greatness, though we often ignore it, is loyalty to old friends and devotion to the old places.

A Little More Juniper

Even lemon growers, for all the boost given to their wares by prohibition, have their troubles. If lemons run too large, they are wanted only for display in restaurant windows. If they run too small, they have to compete with limes. What is wanted is the golden mean.

The lime and the lemon have now been crossed, the hybrid has the virtues of both and merits of its own. The Department of Agriculture announces with triumph this happy wedding.

It is said that the lemon-lime won't be on the market for several seasons yet.

The department, like the dry bureau, is only a couple of years behind the times. Markets have been vending them to men in many varieties of bigger and better cocktails for several seasons back.

If the department wants to do something in a big and original way, why not try to graft lemon-lime twigs on the juniper tree?

Don't Make a Poor Mouth

There are some things difficult to explain in this whirligig age of ours.

You hear people talk about panic, yet you see them pack the motion picture houses, the ball parks, wrestling matches, bridge parties; in fact, every sort of public assembly place where there is amusement, competition and action.

Colonel William A. Barron informs us that the recreational industry of New England has remained firm and dependable. Our vacationists are spending about $500,000,000 annually here in the northeast and the indications are they will hold to that record in 1932.

There is something to talk about. Why go in for "poor mouth" when there are such fine subjects for optimism!
